Accidents Are Always in Season

Blacksburg - The seasons change and farm activities change with them. Accidents persist, however, no matter what the season or the activity may be. They result in untold losses and most of them are preventable.

Virginia Tech Extension specialists report that recent studies indicate that virtually all farm accidents could have been avoided. They take particular note of the many interesting facts appearing in an article by T.T. Stout and B.I. Darbee published in the June 1972 issue of "Ohio Report."

The typical accident occurred when an individual attempted to unclog a piece of moving machinery. These accidents were not the result of inexperience. In fact, most of them occurred when an experienced operator took risks that an inexperienced person would avoid.

Contributing factors included hurrying to meet deadlines, carelessness, fatigue, and mental preoccupation. Planning, worrying, and daydreaming accounted for much of the mental preoccupation. Other contributing factors included such things as new glasses and the failure of children to obey their parents.

Of particular interest is the fact that, of the 60 accidents studied by Stout and Darbee, injuries resulted in an average medical cost of $2,350 per person within the first six months following the accident.

So, no matter what the season or the activity, stay alert and take every precaution to prevent accidents.

AN EDITORIAL

LETTERS AND NEWSPAPERS

Most people like to "get things off their chest," and under freedom they can do it.

That's what free speech and free press are all about.

One of the best ways to get things off your chest is to write a letter to the editor.

This time-honored way of giving one's views and ideas is an important part of our free society and free press.

All letters written to editors cannot be printed. Oftentimes space is lacking. Sometimes the words and ideas may be spiteful, abusive or even libelous. But most readers — and writers — have the opportunity to say what they think.

It is important that people read newspapers with understanding, think for themselves, and take responsible action when they believe it necessary, if only to get it off their chest with a letter to the editor.

In this way, free speech and a free press will continue to guarantee a free and open society.

Hospital Divisions Merged

The obstetrics and pediatrics divisions of Lynchburg General-Marshall Lodge and Virginia Baptist hospitals have merged, effective today. Both units are now located at Virginia Baptist.

As of today, all expectant mothers will go to Virginia Baptist Hospital to have their babies.

All medical pediatric cases will be admitted to the Baptist. A pediatric patient who does not need emergency treatment or surgery is classified as medical pediatric.

Pediatric patients who require emergency treatment should go to the Lynchburg General Hospital Emergency room. After initial treatment is given and if the condition permits they will be transferred to Virginia Baptist Hospital.

All surgical pediatric patients who are scheduled for surgery will continue to be admitted to the hospital of their choice.

The consolidation of these services to be located at the Baptist Hospital has been in the planning for several years.

The advantages and disadvantages of the merger have been carefully weighed by the chiefs of staff at both hospitals in the obstetric and pediatric fields and by the executive directors of the hospitals.

The hospitals' staffs felt that income from obstetrics, nursery, delivery room and pediatrics was insufficient to meet the operating costs of such facilities.

The daily average rate of occupancy for the two services in both hospitals rarely exceeded 50 per cent. Better utilization of services will help hold costs down and justify special laboratory procedures not available now and anesthesia coverage for deliveries.

It will also assure better doctor coverage for deliveries.

The merger is designed to create greater, more involved clinical experience for students in nursing schools and residency programs for both hospitals.

The consolidation will justify a newborn intensive care nursery which has the latest in special monitoring equipment in addition to specially trained personnel.

School Drop-Outs Show Increase

Almost 18,000 students dropped out of Virginia's public high schools during the 1971- 72 school year, the State Department of Education said today.

That figure represented 4.41 percent of the State's enrollment of 407,834, and was a slight increase over the 4.39 percent dropout figure for the previous year. The dropout report for grades eight through 12 was prepared by the agency's Division of Educational Research and Statistics and covered the State's 472 secondary schools.

King and Queen County led all school divisions in the number of dropouts with 10.3 percent of the enrollment leaving classes. Thirty-nine of the 379 students in that county's Central High School left school during the survey year.

Louisa County was the only other locality with a drooout rate exceeding 10 percent. There, 138 of 1,370 students withdrew from school for a 10.1 dropout percentage.

York County led all divisions in student holding ability as only 47 of that county's 3,190 students, or 1.5 percent, left classes. The Town of West Point was close behind. Only five students, or 1.7 percent of the 291 enrolled, withdrew from school.

The dropout rate was highest in cities as five percent of those enrolled left during the year compared with four percent leaving county schools. City school divisions reported 7,323 of 145,022 students dropped out while 10,557 of 260,818 county students withdrew.

Appomattox County shows a low percentage of dropouts for the two schools, high and intermediate, with a total of 899 in all and 26 dropouts giving a total percentage of 2.9.
